Colorado Technical University Colorado Springs Announces New Dean of Business

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO. (Aug. 3, 2010)- Colorado Technical University (CTU) Colorado Springs, a leading provider of career-focused education, recently hired Joseph Heinzman, Jr., DBA as campus dean of the business and management program. In his new role, Heinzman will oversee program development and manage course instructors.

“Dr. Heinzman spent more than 20 years in the business industry before stepping into the education sector,” said Greg Mitchell, CTU Colorado Springs campus president. “His vast teaching experience along with his industry experience will serve him well as he works to ensure our business students receive a career-focused education.”

Heinzman comes to CTU from Hodges University where he served as director of the MBA/MPA program while also teaching undergraduate and MBA classes. In addition, Heinzman is a seasoned professor who gained experience at a number of colleges and universities including Valencia State College, CTU and South University Online. His work has been published in academic journals such as International Business & Economics Research Journal and Journal of Business & Economics Research. Before venturing into education, Heinzman worked for Lockheed-Martin in a variety of business roles.

“I look forward to working with the chairs and getting to know our instructors,” said Heinzman. “Together, we will deliver a quality education that will help our students hit the ground running when they enter their field.”

CTU offers associate, bachelor’s and master’s degrees in a number of business fields. To learn more about these programs and all the degrees available at CTU, please visit: www.coloradotech.edu.
