Colorado Technical University Names Andy Hauk as Site Director of CTU Pueblo Campus

Associate director of admissions takes on new role

Colorado Springs, Colo. (March 1, 2010) – Colorado Technical University (CTU) named Andy Hauk the site director of the CTU Pueblo campus. Formerly the associate director of admissions at CTU Colorado Springs, Hauk now is responsible for overseeing campus operations and facilitating communication between Colorado Springs campus leadership and Pueblo personnel among other day-to-day responsibilities. The position is new to the Pueblo campus.

“As the associate director of admissions, Andy excelled at effectively managing a dynamic team and continuously improving department results,” said Greg Mitchell, president of CTU Southern Colorado, which includes CTU Colorado Springs and CTU Pueblo. “His leadership skills and commitment to CTU makes him a great leader for the Pueblo campus.”

Throughout his career, Hauk has gained extensive managerial, customer service and education experience. A retired member of the Air Force, Hauk began his career conducting and improving training programs for the Air Force. Hauk moved into the food industry and served as a manager for a number of restaurants before working as a senior customer service representative for Progressive Insurance.

Hauk has held admissions positions at CTU and National American University over the past six years. Hauk is also an alumnus of CTU; he earned his MBA in 2006 and is currently working towards a doctor of management degree. Hauk received a bachelor’s degree in history from University of Colorado at Colorado Springs.

As someone who has been on the student and administrative side of CTU, Hauk is excited to get out into the Pueblo community and spread the word about CTU. "As site director, I want to grow the relationship between the campus and the Pueblo community and help CTU serve the community through providing a quality, career-focused education and being a good corporate citizen by giving back," said Hauk.

The CTU Pueblo campus offers degrees in the fields of criminal justice and public administration, business and management, information systems and technology and health sciences. For more information on CTU Pueblo, visit: www.coloradotech.edu/Pueblo.aspx
